Soviet Radio Takes Grave View Of Laos

MOSCOW (AP)-Moscow radio Friday night took a grave view of the Laos situation and de-clared: "Every day increases the danger of imperialist aggression in Laos."

The broadcast, aimed at domestic listeners, said: "Foreign newspapers report that troops are being concentrated for invasion." It went on to say that the Americans are readying 5,000 fighting men who would "fulfil any order." This, said the broadcast, is the background against which the Southeest Asia Treaty Organiza-tion is meeting next Monday. The broadcast concluded by saying American maneuvers are being condemned by "public opinion of all countries."

President Kennedy's warning about Communist interference in Lacs has not been printed in the Soviet press yet.

The government newspaper Izvesta Friday night carried only this item on Kennedy's news con-ference Thursday: "During the evening of March 23, President Kennedy held a routine press conference which was broadcast by radio and television all over the country. The President opened the press conference with a statement devoted to the Laos situation.

"In his replies to questions by correspondents. Kennedy preferred not to go out of the framework of the statement he had made. He refused to confirm or refute a report of the American press that the United States had sent their military ships with units of Marines to Laos."

Soviet Radio Takes Grave View Of Laos

MOSCOW (AP)-Moscow radio Friday night took a grave view of the Laos situation and declared: "Every day increases the danger of imperialist aggression

The broadcast, aimed at domestic listeners, said: "Foreign news-papers report that troops are being concentrated for invasion."

It went on to say that the Americans are readying 5,000 fighting men who would "fulfil any order." This, said the broadcast, is the background against which the Southeast Asia Treaty Organization is meeting next Monday. The broadcast concluded by saying American maneuvers are being condemned by "public opinion of all countries."

President Kennedy's warning about Communist interference in Laos has not been printed in the Soviet press yet.

The government newspaper Izvestia Friday night carried only this item on Kennedy's news conference Thursday: "During the evening of March 23, President Kennedy held a routine press con-ference which was broadcast by radio and television all over the country. The President opened the press conference with a statement devoted to the Laos situation.

"In his replies to questions by ferred not to go out of the framework of the statement he had made. He refused to confirm or refute a report of the American press that the United States had sent their military ship of Marines to Laos."

Mitchell Says ▲ Ike To Help In Bid For Election

PALM SPRINGS, Calif. (UPI)-James Mitchell headed back to New Jersey Friday, heartened with the assurance he would have the active help of former President Eisenhower in his campaign for governor.
"We discussed things of mutual interest." Eisenhower's former labor secretary said. "As Mr. Eisenhower said at his press conference, he has no intention of getting into the primary" for the GOP nomination in New Jersey.

Mitchell referred to Eisenhow-er's statement that "the election would be a different thing" in stating that he was sure the vacationing former President would actively campaign for him in the general election.

"I think it could be safely said that he is keeping contact with his associates and his interest in the political situation of the United States," Mitchell said.

Mitchell was a house guest of Eisenhower Thursday night at nearby Palm Desert.

Don't Want Assistance

Northeast Louisiana is familiar with crop failure due to drought or flood and the matter of federal aid to recover following such set-

It is never a very pleasant experience to undergo such a reverse on the agricultural front, but where there is damage, the farmers usually are willing to submit proper applications.

Now Senator Douglas, an Iliinois Democrat, says he has a depressed area in his state. He has specified Marion County as an area where unemployment has hit hard,

But unlike people in Louisiana or anywhere there is real trouble, the people in Marion County don't go along with the senator's claim. And the Marion Daily Republican supports their argument with the following statistics:

Accounts in the Marion bank have half a million more on deposit than they had on January 1. Local utilities are engaged in a $6 million expansion program. A new federal prison valued at $10 million is being constructed.

Other signs point to the upward swing of business in Marion Coanty. Residents of the area bought $215,000 in U.S. Savings Bonds during the month of January. A new roof was built onto the local hospital, and one of the leading churches is planning a new building. A $40,000 warehouse is under construction, two new office buildings are being built and two finance companies have moved to larger quarters.

Postal service has been added for two new streets indicating the expansion of residential areas.

As has been pointed out above, people are pretty much the same everywhere. If something was really wrong with the economic climate in Marion County, Illinois, the resident would be willing to furnish Senator Douglas information to support that assumption. And no newspaper would dare to run counter to public opinion if such depressed area aid were actually

But the editor there insists that his county could well dispense with "more Federal Santa Claus visits."

In Marion, the people are not asking what the federal government can do for them. Their question is how they can keep their county from cramming unwanted tax money down their throats.

Kennedy Men Integrate

An Associated Press news dispatch says top Kennedy administration officials appear to be avoiding buying or renting houses in racially restricted areas in Washington, D.C.

As a result, many of them are winding up in the historic Georgetown section where President Kennedy recently sold the home where he had lived as a senator before he moved to the white house.

Houses are said to be selling or renting there at what local real estate operators regard as top prices while homes in swank northwest Washington area, which have covenanted restrictions, have not moved as fast.

No evidence of a presidential directive could be found but officials apparently were taking their cue from Secretary of State Dean Rusk, who last month refused to sign a restricted covenant when he purchased a fourbedroom home in the Spring Valley subdivision.

The covenant which, under supreme court edict, is not enforceable in the courts, bars resale of homes in restricted areas to Negroes. In most sales contracts, the purchaser agrees that the real estate company which sold him the house shall act as his agent in any

Although the "no-Negroes" restriction is not enforceable in the courts, segregation in these areas presumably is fairly well preserved because the agents who make the first sales and who have pledges for resales are generally committed to respect the cove-

President Kennedy and his cohorts appear to be a little more consistant in their positions than do some of the congressmen who have backed integration and then moved out to escape having Negro neighbors.

Founders of this country intended that citizens should have the right to dispose of property as they choose. This is still generally but in integration cases the supreme court misinterprets the constitutions and voids valid contracts in its dedicated campaign to force integration.

Valuable Crackpots

Back in the New Deal days a public figure suggested that all our "crackpot liberals" be banished to California, where "pie in the sky" was revered as a sane and moral philosophy.

A few other states, such as New York, might also qualify for "crackpot" supremacy and this might also be true of the District of Columbia, including Washington, the national capital, which is made up of a good many radical congressmen, some saner ones and a total population that is 54.8 per cent Negro.

Some may feel that it would be equally logical to banish all "crackpot conservatives" to some of the southern states.

At least a crackpot conservative is preferable to a crackpot radical. The conservative wants to leave things the way they are and the radical wants to tear them to smithereens or turn them over to the socialists.

Neither proposal, however, is in the American tradition. Democracy's chief source of strength, setting it above any other form of government yet devised, is in its insistence that all men be heard and their proposals be weighed without prejudice. We rely on a majority rule to prevent extremists of either the left or the right from imposing excesses on American policies and procedures.

Extremists and oppositionists serve a real purpose in a democracy. It is those same noisy "crackpots" of each extreme who, by showing up the fallacies espoused by the other, cancel each other out. Thus they tend to keep the majority on an even keel. Progress lies that way. Only democracy, with its majority rule, has that built-in safeguard.

Sometimes it appears that the majority will be swallowed up by the "crackpots" and that we may be headed down the road toward destruction but usually there is a fortunate turning and a return to sanity.

One of the best indications now that the "crackpot liberals" have had their day and that we are heading back toward safety is to be found in the organization of conservative groups in the nation's leading colleges. Formerly the students listened only to the "crackpot liberals" but now they also see and hear the other side.

One Million Identical Bids

Justice Department Outdoes Wildest Expectations By Discovering That Many Were Made To U.S. Agencies In Year

President Kennedy has opered up a real Pandora's box by his decision to crack down on price rigging by throwing the spotlight of publicity on identical contract bids to federal agencies.

Already, the Justice Department has outdone the President's wildest expectations by uncovering more than a million cases where identical bids were made to fideral agencies for just one year-

And Assistant Attorney General Lee Loevinger, the government's chief trustbuster who is handling the investigation, claims that this is just a starter. He reports that nearly all of the cases of identical bids compiled so far by attorneys of his Anti - Trust Division have come from the Defense Department. Other agencies, including the giant General Services Administration that handles most of the government's buying, are still to report their findings.

This wholly unexpected floo cases so staggered Loevinger that the chief trustbuster has made an urgent plea to Congress for more funds and manpower.

Conferring with Senator Estes Kefauver (D., Tenn.), chairman of the Senate Anti-Monopoly Subcommittee, and Representative Emanuel Celler (D., N. Y.), chairman of the House Anti - Trust Subcommittee, Loevinger revealed that the task given him by the President had nearly paralyzed

"The staff has been working night and day. If we do nothing else but compile and publish the information that the President has asked for, we will have to work 24 hours a day, 365 days a year to accomplish the job."

Pointing out that the bid rigging study was the biggest job ever handled by the Anti . Trust Divisien. Leevinger said, "We have already uncovered more than a million cases of identical bids just for the year 1960. Most of these instances were found in the Defense Department. We haven't even begun to scratch the surface with the other federal agencies." Senator Kefauver and Representative Celler promised full cooperation, saying that they would support any request Loevinger made of Congress.

"We will give you all the help you need," Kefauver said, "When I ask the Justice Department for list of witnesses that appeared before the grand jury in the electrical bid rigging case in Philadelphia. I hope you will reciprocate. I'm going to need those names to push my own investigation."

The Presidential order and the Justice Department's investigation stem from the case of the electrical company executives who were jailed for rigging bids on federal contracts.

TOURIST PROGRAM - Congress soon will provide the money and the means for the new Administration's plan to broadcast America's virtues as a tourist mecca. Legislation to broaden significantly the U.S. travel promotion program, already passed by the Senate, will be considered by the House after Easter. That's what Democratic congressional leaders have promised President Kennedy, They have informed him that if there is any debate, it will be over details and not the idea. Under the Senate - passed bill, a U. S. travel service would be created as a top - level agency in the Commerce Department. It would be headed by an Assistant Secretary of Commerce for Travel. This official would have up to $5 million to spend in the first year of the program. The money would be used for advertising in foreign newspapers and journals, promobrochures handed out abroad, and for travel centers in overseas cities. The President plans to name an old friend. Lemoyne Billings, of New York, to head the service . . . Governor Frank Morrison, of Nebraska, has already notified President Kennedy that he plans to launch a statesponsored tourist program this summer to attract foreign visitors to the Cornhusker state. He plans to offer low - cost five-and-tenday tours of the state.

Skills Of Aged

Older People In This Country Best-Fitted For Peace Corps

The idea of a Peace Corps is premised on the assumption that the United States has something to contribute to the lives of other peoples. Digging ditches is not precisely a very valuable contribution, nor is it of tremendous significance that an athlete comes among people who are runners because they have no vehicles to carry them.

However, there is a part of the American population that is experienced, competent and able. They have experience because they have devoted about 40 years of their lives to some particular operation; they are competent hecause they have been continuously retained in their field; they are still able because in our country men are not retired from their work because they are sick or feeble, or incompetent, but arbitrarily at a specific age either to satisfy a legislative dictum or to fulfill the requirements of an insurance contract.

For instance, there are thousands of men who have served in the Army, Navy, and Air Force for long periods who are required to retire by law. Usually, these are highly trained and skilled human beings. Why not put these in the Peace Corps rather than out to pasture as is done nowadays?

Many men and women are forced to retire at the ages of 62 or 65 because that is the pension fund arrangement. This group includes successful businessmen, engineers, scientists, university professors and almost every kind of person you can think of. These people have needed skills, particular abilities which no eager beaver just out of college can have because he has not lived long enough or benefited by so extensive an experience. When to the enthusiasm of youth is added the experience of age, a task has a chance of being successful.

Why not mobilize these older men and women to be a Peace Corps, to aid countries that need experts more than they need inthusiasm? Why not send over-age doctors into areas that could benefit by skilled physicians and

Why not send engineers into countries that need bridges or dams or irrigation? Why not send over-age professors to teach in universities which are short of adequate faculty?

This appears to me more practical than to send teams of very young, very enthusiastic, and very inexperienced boys and girls into difficult countries where one word can do more mischief than a hundred cannons. The missionaries sent to various countries from the United States were much like the proposed Peace Corps, except that those who went into backward countries expected to spend all their lives there. They devoted themselves unstintingly and permanently to their particular tasks. There was not talk about a two year term or a three year term. They came to

were married; the Catholic priests and nuns, of course, were not married, but they too remained at their stations permanently, and if there is affection left for the United States anywhere in the non-Communist world, it is due more to missionaries than to government officials and businessmen. The Peace Corps, it is to be assumed, is being mobilized to win friends for the United States. If it is to do that, its work must be useful and its personnel must be appreciated. There is a vast experience on this subject, going back to the 1830's. The remarkable fact is that long before we became a world leader, the United States was a favorably regarded nation. It is hard to think of Saudi Arabia kicking us out of Bahrein and becoming a neutral, but that is happening now because the weak and backward countries wonder whether we are strong and forward. They have witnessed the great United States knuckle under to small countries and its knuckling under has never been regarded as a respect for the rights of mankind, but as weakness and uncertainty. No truly great country would permit Castro, for instance, to act as he has toward the United States. The result of weakness is neutralism.

Can a Peace Corps turn back the tide that has been moving against the United States? That is its function and it is for that purpose that it needs to be organized. To do effective work, competent, able, experienced men and women need to be mobiliized. Either such a job is conceived correctly or it should not

Taut Decisions

In Politics, As In Sports, Hard Contests Bring Out Best

WASHINGTON, D. C. - In polities, as in sports, it is the hard contests, with the taut decisions, which bring out the best, the worst and the in - between traits of the contestants. This was recently the story on the Unemployment Compensation Extension bill where the Kennedy Administration won a squeaking victory, 44-42, to override some States' Rights, pay-as-yougo provisions brought in by the Senate Finance Committee.

The Best: Senator Harry Byrd, a member of the upper chamber when the original legislation passed 25 years ago, was in top form in defending the basic concept of insurance for the jobless. The cost by the wage - paying industries within each State. The givers and receivers of the aid money should be within the individual States. The amounts and methods of distributing the aid are thus controlled at home. But no jobless worker need suffer when his State's resources run low. Credits from the Federal Treasury become available. Thus runs the Byrd reasoning. Byrd opposed the Administration plan (partially approved in the House) of tossing all the money into a huge Federal heap and of nationalizing our jobless insurance. The House plan worked out so that employers in 39 States would be contributing to unemployment payments in 9 other States which do not meet their obligations. (The remaining 2 of the 50 states would break about even.) Byrd argued from his depth of experience and conviction that 'such a Federalized account would be a license for deficit States to exercise less care and encourage surplus States to relax the efficiency." In fine, everybody's (Federal) money is no-body's money — so who cares?

The Worst: Senator Joe Clark, a sitting duck for the Devil's temptation of demagoguery, began to react in character. Clark cried out: "It is the simple question of human rights against property ... It is plutocracy against democracy!" This outburst, as the famous comic opera aria goes, had no more to do with the issues than "the flowers that bloom in the spring, tra-la' and other Senators were too embarrassed to answer Clark, At another point Clark got off on one of his favorite theses. It holds that the Constitution was all wrong in preserving State sovereignty - "wrong every year, and it is wrong now." Clark declaimed about Unemployment Compensation — but encompassing all recognition of the States as individual entities. The In - Betweens: Three stalwart Republicans voted for the Administration position. Their shift made the Kennedy victory possible, Senators Keating, Kunchel and Scott are all men of intelligence whose positions deserve respect. I sought out each of them to get personal motivations.

Keating felt that this was an issue of industrial States vs. agrorural States rather than Democrats vs. Republicans, or Liberals vs. Censervatives. For years, he said, New York State had contributed to funds for reclamation. agriculture, education and other nation - wide problems. Industrial unemployment is equally a national problem. Therefore, he saw no reason why New York State should not take the help of other States in meeting its jobless insurance payments.

Kuchel told me that he had asked, and would again ask, all the 50 States to help pay for California reclamation, irrigation and urban water projects. He regarded water and land conservation -as well as jobless pay — as vital to the whole nation. Behind Kuchel's vote, I think, was the knowledge that California cmployment is geared to another national activity — military defense. The cancellation or shift of Defense work could suddenly load even greater unemployment payments upon the California economy. Should not the entire country share the burden?

Scott said that he favored the Byrd philosophy, but made an exception on Unemployment Compensation. He told me, "I am a little tired of Pennsylvania financing Mississippi in practically every Federal program, Byrd's proposition would be like asking the State of Kansas to finance its own wheat supports all by it-

Well, so it goes. It seems a long while since that chilly day in January when President Kennedy implored us: "Ask not what your country can do for you - ask what you can do for your country." Already the States are being taught by this welfare legislation to ask - "What's in it for

Northeast Louisiana is familiar with crop failure due to drought or flood and the matter of federal aid to recover following such set-

It is never a very pleasant experience to undergo such a reverse on the agricultural front, but where there is damage, the farmers usually are willing to submit proper applications.

Now Senator Douglas, an Illinois Democrat, says he has a depressed area in his state. He has specified Marion County as an area where unemployment has hit hard.

But unlike people in Louisiana or anywhere there is real trouble, the people in Marion County don't go along with the senator's claim. And the Marion Daily Republican supports their argument with the following statistics:

Accounts in the Marion bank have half a million more on deposit than they had on January 1. Local utilities are engaged in a $6 million expansion program. A new federal prison valued at $10 million is being constructed.

Other signs point to the upward swing of business in Marion County. Residents of the area bought $215,000 in U.S. Savings Bonds during the month of January. A new roof was built onto the local hospital, and one of the leading churches is planning a new building. A $400,000 warehouse is under construction, two new office buildings are being built and two finance companies have moved to larger quarters.

Postal service has been added for two new streets indicating the expansion of residential areas.

As has been pointed out above, people are pretty much the same everywhere. If something was really wrong with the economic climate in Marion County, Illinois, the resident would be willing to furnish Senator Douglas information to support that assumption. And no newspaper would dare to run counter to public opinion if such depressed area aid were actually necessary.

But the editor there insists that his county could well dispense with "more Federal Santa Claus visits."

In Marion, the people are not asking what the federal government can do for them. Their question is how they can keep their county from cramming unwanted tax money down their throats.

Kennedy Men Integrate

An Associated Press news dispatch says top Kennedy administration officials appear to be avoiding buying or renting houses in racially restricted areas in Washington, D.C.

As a result, many of them are winding up in the historic Georgetown section where President Kennedy recently sold the home where he had lived as a senator before he moved to the white house.

Houses are said to be selling or renting there at what local real estate operators regard as top prices while homes in swank northwest Washington area, which have covenanted restrictions, have not moved as fast.

No evidence of a presidential directive could be found but officials apparently were taking their cue from Secretary of State Dean Rusk, who last month refused to sign a restricted covenant when he purchased a fourbedroom home in the Spring Valley subdivision.

The covenant which, under supreme court edict, is not enforcehomes in restricted areas to Negroes. In most sales contracts, the purchaser agrees that the real estate company which sold him the house shall act as his agent in any

Although the "no-Negroes" restriction is not enforceable in the courts, segregation in these areas presumably is fairly well preserved because the agents who make the first sales and who have pledges for resales are generally committed to respect the cove-

President Kennedy and his cohorts appear to be a little more consistant in their positions than do some of the congressmen who have backed integration and then moved out to escape having Negro neighbors.

Founders of this country intended that citizens should have the right to dispose of property as they choose. This is still generally but in integration cases the supreme court misinterprets the constitutions and voids valid contracts in its dedicated campaign to force integration.

Valuable Crackpots

A few other states, such as New York, might also qualify for and a total population that is 54.8 per cent Negro.

Some may feel that it would be equally logical to banish all "crackpot conservatives" to some of the southern states.

At least a crackpot conservative is preferable to a crackpot radical. The conservative wants to leave things the way they are and the radical wants to tear them to smithereens or turn them over to the socialists.

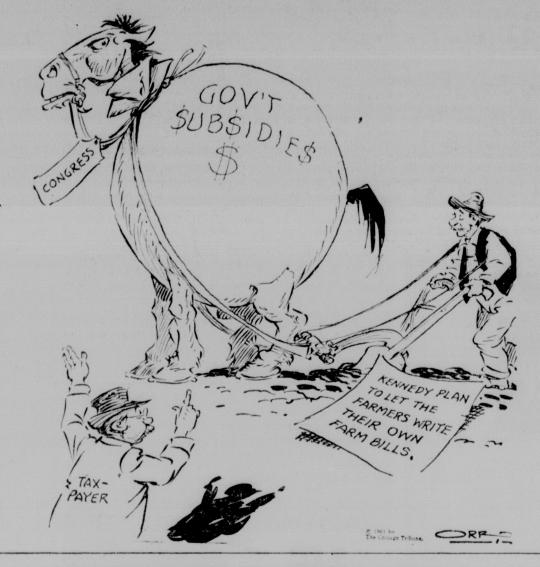

the American tradition. Democracy's chief source of strength, setting it above any other form of government yet devised, is in can policies and procedures.

Extremists and oppositionists serve a real purpose in a democracy. It is those same noisy "crackpots" of each extreme who, by showing up the fallacies espoused by the other, cancel each other out. Thus they tend to keep the majority on an even keel. Progress lies that way. Only democracy, with its majority rule, has that built-in safeguard.

Sometimes it appears that the majority will be swallowed up by the "crackpots" and that we may be headed down the road toward destruction but usually there is a fortunate turning and a return

One of the best indications now that the "crackpot liberals" have had their day and that we are heading back toward safety is to be found in the organization of conservative groups in the nation's leading colleges. Formerly the students listened only to the "crackpot liberals" but now they also

Justice Department Outdoes Wildest Expectations By Discovering That Many Were Made To U.S. Agencies In Year

President Kennedy has opened up a real Pandora's box by his decision to crack down on price rigging by throwing the spotlight publicity on identical contract bids to federal agencies.

Already, the Justice Department has outdone the President's wildest expectations by uncovering more than a million cases where identical bids were made to federal agencies for just one year-

And Assistant Attorney General Lee Loevinger, the government's chief trustbuster who is handling the investigation, claims that this is just a starter. He reports that nearly all of the cases of identical bids compiled so far by attorneys of his Anti - Trust Division have come from the Defense Department. Other agencies, including the giant General Services Administration that handles most of the gov-ernment's buying, are still to report their findings. This wholly unexpected flood of cases so staggered Loevinger that the chief trustbuster has made an urgent plea to Congress for more funds and manpower.

Conferring with Senator Estes Kefauver (D., Tenn.), chairman of the Senate Anti-Monopoly Subcommittee, and Representative Emanuel Celler (D., N. Y.), chairman of the House Anti - Trust Subcommittee, Loevinger revealed that the task given him by the President had nearly paralyzed

"The staff has been working night and day. If we do nothing else but compile and publish the information that the President has asked for, we will have to work 24 hours a day, 365 days a year to accomplish the job."

Pointing out that the bid rigging study was the biggest job ever handled by the Anti - Trust Division, Loevinger said, "We have already uncovered more than a million cases of identical bids just for the year 1960. Most of these instances were found in the Defense Department. We haven't even begun to scratch the surface with the other federal agencies.

Senator Kefauver and Representative Celler promised full coop eration, saying that they would support any request Loevinger made of Congress.

Note: Also planning to help Loevinger are Senator Paul Douglas Ill.) and Representative Wright Patman (D., Tex.), who talked the President into issuing his executive order. They told the President that they plan to push legislation that will give his order full congressional backing.

WOOING TAXPAYERS - Internal Revenue Commissioner Mortimer Caplin is talking over with congressional leaders a plan that would have his tax collectors go easy on taxpayers who volunteer that they have been omitting interest and dividend income from their annual tax returns.

Under the Caplin plan, collectors would forgive the back - tax penalty - five per cent of the unpaid tax.

"This would not be a general amnesty," Caplin cautions the legislators. "However, the law offers enough leeway for forgiveness of the taxpayers who honestly didn't know that interest and dividend income is taxable.

TOURIST PROGRAM - Congress soon will provide the money and the means for the new Ad ministration's plan to broadcast America's virtues as a tourist mecca. Legislation to broaden significantly the U.S. travel promotion program, already passed by the Senate, will be considered by the House after Easter. That's what Democratic congressional leaders have promised President Kennedy. They have informed him that if there is any debate, it will be over details and not the idea. Under the Senate - passed bill, a U. S. travel service would be created as a top - level agency in the Commerce Department. It would be headed by an Assistant Secretary of Commerce for Travel This official would have up to $5 million to spend in the first year of the program. The money would be used for advertising in foreign newspapers and journals, promo-tional brochures handed out abroad, and for travel centers in overseas cities. The President plans to name an old friend, Lenoyne Billings, of New York, to head the service . . . Governor Frank Morrison, of Nebraska, has already notified President Kennedy that he plans to launch a statesponsored tourist program this summer to attract foreign visitors to the Cornhusker state. He plans to offer low - cost five-and-ten-day tours of the state.

Skills Of Aged

Older People In This Country Best-Fitted For Peace Corps

The idea of a Peace Corps is premised on the assumption that the United States has something to contribute to the lives of other peoples. Digging ditches is not precisely a very valuable contribution, nor is it of tremendous significance that an athlete comes among people who are runners because they have no vehicles to carry them.

However, there is a part of the American population that is experienced, competent and able. They have experience because they have devoted about 40 years of their lives to some particular operation; they are competent because they have been continuously retained in their field; they are still able because in our country men are not retired from their work because they are sick or feeble, or incompetent, but arbitrarily at a specific age either to satisfy a legislative dictum or to fulfill the requirements of an insurance contract.

For instance, there are thousands of men who have served in the Army, Navy, and Air Force for long periods who are required to retire by law. Usually, these are highly trained and skilled human beings. Why not put these in the Peace Corps rather than out to pasture as is done now-

Many men and women are forced to retire at the ages of 62 or 65 because that is the pension fund arrangement. This group includes successful businessmen, engineers, scientists, university professors and almost every kind of person you can think of. These people have needed skills, particular abilities which no eager beaver just out of college can have because he has not lived long enough or benefited by so extensive an experience. When to the experience of age, a task has a chance of being successful.

Why not mobilize these older men and women to be a Peace Corps, to aid countries that need experts more than they need tnthusiasm? Why not send over-age doctors into areas that could benefit by skilled physicians and surgeons?

Why not send engineers into countries that need bridges or dams or irrigation? Why not send over-age professors to teach in universities which are short of adequate faculty?

This appears to me more practical than to send teams of very young, very enthusiastic, and very inexperienced boys and girls into difficult countries where one word can do more mischief than a hundred cannons. The missionaries sent to various countries from the United States were much like the proposed Peace Corps, except that those who went into backward countries expected to spend all their lives there. They devoted themselves unstintingly and permanently to their particular tasks. There was not talk about a two year term or a three year term. They came to

were married; the Catholic priests and nuns, of course, were not married, but they too remained at their stations permanently, and if there is affection left for the United States anywhere in the non-Communist world, it is due more to missionaries than to government officials and businessmen. The Peace Corps, it is to be assumed, is being mobilized to win friends for the United States. If it is to do that, its work must be useful and its personnel must be appreciated. There is a vast experience on this subject, going back to the 1830's. The remarkable fact is that long before we became a world leader, the United States was a favorably regarded nation. It is hard to think of Saudi Arabia kicking us out of Bahrein and becoming a neutral, but that is happening now because the weak and backward countries wonder whether we are strong and forward. They have witnessed the great United States knuckle under to small countries and its knuckling under has never been regarded as a respect for the the enthusiasm of youth is added rights of mankind, but as weakness and uncertainty. No truly great country would permit Castro, for instance, to act as he has toward the United States. The result of weakness is neutralism.

Can a Peace Corps turn back the tide that has been moving against the United States? That is its function and it is for that purpose that it needs to be organized. To do effective work, competent, able, experienced men and women need to be mobiliized. Either such a job is conceived correctly or it should not be done at all.

This was recently the story on the Unemployment Compensation Extension bill where the Kennedy Administration won a squeaking victory, 44-42, to override some States' Rights, pay-as-yougo provisions brought in by the Senate Finance Committee.

a member of the upper chamber when the original legislation passed 25 years ago, was in top form in defending the basic concept of insurance for the jobless. The cost by the wage - paying industries within each State. The givers and receivers of the aid money should be within the individual States. The amounts and methods of distributing the aid are thus controlled at home. But no jobless worker need suffer when his State's resources run low. Credits from the Federal Treasury become available. Thus runs the Byrd reasoning. Byrd opposed the Administration plan (partially approved in the House) of tossing all the money into a huge Federal heap and of nationalizing our jobless insurance. The House plan worked out so that employers in 39 States would be contributing to unemployment payments in 9 other States which do not meet their obligations. (The remaining 2 of the 50 states would break about even.) Byrd argued from his depth of experience and conviction that 'such a Federalized account would be a license for deficit States to exercise less care and encourage surplus States to relax the efficiency." In fine, every-body's (Federal) money is no-

body's money — so who cares? The Worst: Senator Joe Clark, a sitting duck for the Devil's temptation of demagoguery, began to react in character. Clark cried out: "It is the simple question of human rights against property rights! . . . It is plutocracy against democracy!" This outburst, as the famous comic opera aria goes, had no more to do with the issues than "the flowers that bloom in the spring, tra-la" - and other Senators were too embarrasssd to answer Clark. At another point Clark got off on one of his favorite theses. It holds that the Constitution was all wrong in preserving State sovereignty - "wrong every year, and it is wrong now," Clark declaimed about Unemployment Compensation - but encompassing all recognition of the States as individual entities.

He regarded water and land conservationas well as jobless pay - as vital to the whole nation. Behind Kuchel's vote, I think, was the knowledge that California employment is geared to another national activity - military defense. The cancellation or shift of Defense work could suddenly load even greater unemployment pay-ments upon the California economy. Should not the entire country share the burden?

Scott said that he favored the Byrd philosophy, but made an exception on Unemployment Compensation. He told me, "I am a little tired of Pennsylvania financing Mississippi in practically every Federal program. DAILY CRYPTOQUOTE - Here's how to work it:

AXYDLBAAXR is LONGFELLOW

One letter simply stands for another. In this sample ${\bf A}$ is used for the three L's, X for the two O's, etc. Single letters, apostrophies, the length and formation of the words are all hints. Each day the code letters are different.

Pelicans Fall To Bonita By 13-4 Margin

Bonita took a 13-4 baseball over Southside's Pels here yesterday: Perkins and Weems handled the Pel pitching and Bennett worked behind the plate. McHardy went all the way for the winners with Hart doing the catching.

Perkins went six innings, gave up 6 hits, 10 runs, walked 11 and struck out 5 for the Pelicans. Weems went one inning gave up no hits, 3 runs, 3 walks and struck McHardy gave up only six hits, 1 walk, struck out 11 men and gave up four runs.

Sepulvado was Southside's leading hitter, getting two hits in four times at bat, while P. Herrington got two for four for Bonita.

'Lot Of Bull' Hauled Out Of Unused Silo

FERRIDAY (Special) — Theres a lot of "bull" in this tale. A 1,200 - pound bull named "Burly" fell 35feet to the bottom of an unused silo at Elysian Fields plantation, near here, Thursday afternoon, but apparently miraculously escaped serious

The local fire department worked several hours freeing the animal. They used a winch truck with a boom to lift him from the bottom.

The bull, a pet, was owned by A. B. Dillie, owner of the area plantation.

He told firemen the silo had not been used for several years and it was boarded up. The bull apparently wandered through the door and fell through some rotten boards. "He is a little sore but there are no broken bones,"

Mrs. Dillie said. "After we got him out, he just got up and walked around," one of the firemen

A veterinarian was called to assist with placing the rigging around the animal's body. "Bully" was rescued around 6:00 p.m. Thats a lot of "bull" said the firemen and others who rescued "Bully".

Dinner Party Given For Bridal Couple

Mr. and Mrs. Edwin McFadden Watkins of West Monroe, were hosts at a dinner party last evening preceding rehear sal for the wedding of their son, Edwin McFadden Watkins Jr. and Miss Connie Barnett of Clinton, which will be solemnized tonight at o'clock in the Clinton Baptist Church, Miss Barnett is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Barnett Jr. of Clin-

The dinner party was given in the Green Room of the Clinton Cafe. Centering the Ushaped table was an arrangement of pale pink roses, pale pink lilacs, and lily-of-the-valley, flanked by candelabra holding tapers. Extending down the table were tall tap ers entwined with garlands of green ivy and encircled with nosegays of pink roses, lilyof - the - valley, pink net and white ribbon. Place cards were of white parchment edged in pink with sprays of lily - of - the - valley attached.

Miss Barnett was presented a corsage of rosebuds and lily - of - the - valley interspersed with pink net and white ribbon to compliment her dress of silk block print in pink and blue pastel shades. Members of the bridal party were invited to share the occasion with the honor
